The Grand Jury charges:

COUNT ONE

Introduction

1. At various times relevant to this Indictment, the following defendants and others known and unknown to the Grand Jury, were members and associates of the Almighty Latin King and Queen Nation (hereinafter "Latin Kings"), a criminal organization involved in the commission of numerous acts of criminal conduct in the Middle District of North Carolina, the Eastern District of North Carolina, the Western District of North Carolina, and elsewhere: JORGE PETER CORNELL, also known as "King J" and "King Jay," RUSSELL LLOYD KILFOIL, also known as "King Peaceful" and "Jonathan Hernandez," RANDOLPH LEIF KILFOIL, also known as "King Paul," JASON PAUL YATES, also known as "King Squirrel," LUIS ALBERTO ROSA, also known as "King Speechless," WESLEY ANDERSON WILLIAMS, also known as "King Bam," STEAPHAN ACENCIO-VASQUEZ, also known as "King Leo," MARCELO YSRAEL PEREZ, also known as "King Lyrix" and "King Sacrifice," SAMUEL ISAAC VELASQUEZ, also known as "King Hype," CHARLES LAWRENCE MOORE, also known as "King Toasty," RICHARD LEE ROBINSON, also known as "King Focus," IRVIN VASQUEZ, also known as "King Dice," and CARLOS COLEMAN, also known as "King Spanky."

2. The Latin Kings is a violent street gang with thousands of members across the United States and overseas. The traditional power centers of the Latin Kings, and members of the gang's national leadership structure, are located in the Chicago (known as "KMC" or the "Motherland") and New York (known as the "Bloodline") metropolitan areas.

3. The Latin Kings has a detailed and uniform organizational structure, which is outlined - along with various "prayers," codes of behavior, and rituals - in a written "manifesto" widely distributed to members throughout the country. Prospective Latin Kings members are required to memorize "knowledge" regarding the structure, rituals, and behavioral codes of the Latin Kings before they can become full members.

4. At the local level, groups of Latin Kings are organized into "tribes," which are traditionally anchored to a geographic area, such as a city. Depending on the area, a tribe can contain anywhere from a few dozen to a few hundred members. Within each tribe, the leader is known as the "First Crown." Other leaders in each tribe include the "Second Crown," who is second-in-command of the tribe; the "Third Crown," who is the "Warlord" or "Enforcer" for the tribe; the "Fourth Crown," who is the "Treasurer" for the tribe; and the "Fifth Crown," who is the "Secretary" for the tribe. Each position in the tribe has defined responsibilities, and members are required to follow the instructions and directives of the gang's leadership. For example, the "Third Crown" is responsible for inflicting discipline on members and organizing the gang during "wars" with other gangs.

5. The state or regional hierarchy generally mirrors the organizational structure of the tribes. The state or regional leader is known as the "Inca." These leaders report to the national leadership of the Latin Kings, who advise and direct local leaders.

6. Members of the Latin Kings are also traditionally given "King Names" or "Queen Names," which are names other than their legal names and names by which they are known to members of the gang and to others on the street. One of the purposes of having "King Names" or "Queen Names" is to obfuscate the identities of members from law enforcement.

7. Each tribe typically has weekly meetings, at which dues are collected from each member of the tribe and gang business is discussed. On a periodic basis, all the tribes in a given region hold a larger meeting, called a "universal." At these meetings, issues that concern the Latin Kings as a whole (such as cooperation among tribes) are discussed. Each of the tribes in a given region reports to, and pays dues to, the state or regional leadership.

8. Latin Kings leaders have the authority within the gang to order "missions" and mete out punishment. A "mission" is an assignment given to a subordinate Latin Kings member that will serve a purpose for the Latin Kings gang. "Missions" can include but are not limited to the following: a "physical," meaning a member beating another member in the back or chest for a specific duration of time, such as one minute or three minutes, depending on the severity of the infraction; a "B.O.S." (beat down on sight), meaning the assault of a rival gang member or a Latin Kings member who has committed a violation of the Latin Kings rules; and a "green light" or "T.O.S." (terminate on sight), meaning the murder of a rival gang member or of a Latin Kings member who may have committed an egregious violation of the gang's rules. Failure to perform a "mission" results in the assigned member being in violation of the rules. Punishment for failing to complete the "mission" can range anywhere from a beating to death.

9. Members of the Latin Kings greet each other, and show their membership in the gang, using a set of hand-signs, each intended to evoke the shape of a crown. Latin Kings often greet one another, demonstrate their allegiance to the gang, or simply announce their arrival or presence in a particular area, by exclaiming "ADR" or "Amor De Rey," which means "King's Love" in Spanish. Other phrases unique to the Latin King lexicon include "360," "ALKN," "ALKQN," "Crown," "Lion," "Lion Tribe," "Motherland," "KMC," "Kingism," and "Bloodline." The Latin Kings employs a robust symbology as well, with members often using variations of three- or five-pointed crowns, lions, and Inca- or Aztec-inspired artwork to demonstrate their affiliation. Many members have tattoos incorporating one or more of the aforementioned phrases or symbols, the crown and lion being the most prominent. The Latin Kings also incorporates these phrases and symbols into graffiti, which its members use to mark its territory or announce its presence in a particular area. The colors associated with the Latin Kings are black and gold, and members of the Latin Kings often demonstrate their affiliation with the Latin Kings by wearing clothing containing the colors black and gold, or incorporating the gang's other symbols or phrases.

10. The Latin Kings members communicate with members of their own tribe and with members across the United States in person and through the use of telephone, e-mail, and social networking websites.

11. The Latin Kings has operated in the Middle District of North Carolina since at least 2005, and members in North Carolina have reported to both Chicago and New York-based leadership. The Latin Kings were formed in North Carolina by JORGE PETER CORNELL, also known as "King J" and "King Jay" [hereinafter "CORNELL"], who became a member of the Latin Kings while he was residing in New York City. CORNELL claimed that he had been the "Third Crown" or "Warlord" of his tribe in New York City. When CORNELL moved to the Middle District of North Carolina, he formed a tribe and became the "Inca" for the entire state of North Carolina. CORNELL typically recruited socially disassociated teenagers and others whom he could easily manipulate to join his tribe. Through violence, threats of violence, and coercion, CORNELL required all of the Latin Kings tribes in North Carolina, including chapters in Greensboro, Charlotte, Durham, and Raleigh, to fall under his control. CORNELL reported to various Latin Kings leaders in Chicago and elsewhere, including leaders known as "King Mission" and "King Radar." When Latin Kings members in North Carolina resisted his leadership, CORNELL (in an effort to maintain control over the entire state of North Carolina) ordered that those members be assaulted or killed.

12. In an attempt to disguise the criminal activities of the Latin Kings and frustrate law enforcement attempts to investigate and prosecute Latin Kings members, CORNELL orchestrated a public relations campaign to falsely portray the Latin Kings as a public service organization. While secretly plotting to murder or assault Latin Kings members who resisted his leadership and rival gang members, CORNELL made public statements for peace between street gangs in Greensboro, North Carolina. CORNELL also regularly met with and held media events with religious, civic, and other community leaders. During these media events, CORNELL and other leaders advocated that the Greensboro Police Department's gang unit, which had been investigating Latin Kings members and the gang's criminal activities, be disbanded.

The Racketeering Enterprise

13. The Latin Kings, including its leadership, members, and associates, constituted an "enterprise" as defined in Section 1961(4) of Title 18, United States Code, that is, a group of individuals associated in fact who engaged in, and the activities of which affected, interstate and foreign commerce. The enterprise constitutes an ongoing organization whose members function as a continuing unit for a common purpose of achieving the objectives of the enterprise.

Purposes of the Enterprise

14. The purposes of the enterprise, include, but are not limited to, the following:

- c. Keeping victims, members, and associates in fear of the Latin Kings and in fear of its members and associates through intimidation, violence, threats of violence, and destruction of property;
- d. Preserving and protecting the Latin Kings and its leaders by keeping its members and associates from cooperating with law enforcement through intimidation, violence, threats of violence, and destruction of property; and
- e. Providing support to gang members who are charged with, or incarcerated for, gang-related activities.
